THE NEW BONNET.

BY STERLING KANE.

"Oh, it's just the sweetest bonnet I ever saw! I did wish I could buy it!" "And why couldn't you, Parthy? Heaven knows you earn it, working yourself to death year in and year out for Bob Riggers and his children."

"Gracious, Gerildy! Put $12 in a bonnet? Why, I'd feel as if I was stealing from my own family! And people would say I was putting on airs-trying to look like a girl!"

"Well, is there any harm in trying to look young? As to not being able to buy the bonnet, Parthy, you ought to do as I do when 1 want a thing!"
"How's that, Gerildy?"

"Why, I just look Hector Jones in the eyes and tell him it's got to come, and that settles it. He knows I won't stand any foolishness from him." "But suppose he can't afford it?"

"Afford it, fiddlesticks! Men can afford a great many things when they find they have to. Why, I wouldn't allow the best man living to preach economy to me. I don't believe in women marrying just to do without things and turn herself into a savings bank. I tell black longs if he's so fond bank. I tell Heck Jones if he's so fond of economy he can practice it himself. Go buy the bonnet, Parthy, pink roses and all, for you deserve it.'

"I don't think I ought to, Gerildy; $12 means a great deal to my husband, just now especially."

"You can get it for less than that, Parthy! Run it down; pretend you don't think it's pretty and becoming, and the milliner'll be glad enough to knock off a dollar or two."

"No, Gerildy; you can't persuade me to be extravagant. I am trying to help my husband, for he works hard, and I feel that we ought to do something for the poor and needy this winter."

"Goodness gracious, Parthy Riggers!
I never saw such a woman. You'll be sailing off to heaven the first thing you know. You're getting so good! But suppose we go and look at the bonnet to-morrow: that'll not cost your husband or the poor anything, will it?" Parthy consented, though she had no idea of buying the bonnet, and was sorry she had mentioned the subject to Mrs. Jones, for that lady would be sure to denounce the prudence and economy of her neighbor as penuriousness.

Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Riggers entered the little milliner's together to see the bonnet with pink roses. To oblige Mrs. Jones Parthy Riggers put it on her head. Mrs. Jones at once exclaimed, "Don't buy it, Parthy! It doesn't become you at all." Mrs. Parthy was much relieved. "Let me try it on!" said Mrs. Jones, as she proceeded to find fault with the bonnet, saying she was much disappointed in it. She stood before the mirror, however, and eyed herself admiringly on every side. "I might be induced to take it," she said to the milliner, "if you'll come down in the price. I don't need it, but the pink roses are becoming to me!" "But you've bought your winter bonnet, haven't you, Gerildy?" said Mrs.

Riggers, with surprise.
"Yes, but I look so well in this," she

The milliner fell in her price from $12 to $10. Mrs. Jones walked away with the bonnet, and it was charged on an account already overdue. On their way home the two ladies stopped in a store where Mrs. Biggers wished to make a small necessary purchase. Here Mrs. Jones spied a delicately embroidered pink scarf, which was a perfect match to the roses on her new bonnet. "Wouldn't they go sweet together?" she said. Just the thing for the noonday wedding I'm going to next week."

"But don't you think it's a good deal to pay for a scarf, Gerildy?" said Parthy. Mrs. Jones looked down at her little neighbor with a smile of contempt, ordered the scarf charged to Mr. Jones and walked out.

Passing another store she remembered that the gloves bought for her first bonnet would not go with the new one; so a pair of gloves were added to the morning purchases.

Mrs. Parthy's heart just ached for poor Mr. Jones, and she said to her husband that night at supper: "What can a man do when he's made a mistake like that at the altar? If I were a man, I think I'd go off to a club or a saloon, too, if I had a wife that cared for noth-ing but bedecking herself and making a show, only that wouldn't change matters or pay the bills."
"Don't worry yourself over the foolishness of other women, Partny!" said Mr. Riggers. "Mistress Jones will come to the end of the rope soon."

The next day Mrs. Jones displayed her investments to a neighbor as dressy and as silly as herself. As Mrs. Jones stood with the pink roses on her head and the pink scarf wound about her neck, exclaiming: "Ain't they lovely!"
Mrs. Lighthead raised her eyes and hands in holy horror. "Goodness gracious, Gorildy Jones! Are you going to wear them lovely things with your old green silk? Why don't you get a green satin waist for the old skirt, then you will make people stare, and lay everybody in the shade, sure enough! That was sufficient. The satin waist was bought. Trimmed and finished it cost $16, bonnet $10, scarf $7, gloves $2 -$35; quite a little sum out of $1,500 a year, and poor Jones already tearing his hair and tossing restlessly at night on account of money troubles and fearful of losing his position.

But he never told his troubles at home. He found no sympathy there. The only check he ever gave Mrs. Jones was to exclaim now and then. 'For God's sake, Gorildy, have some pity on a man!" 'If you can't support me, Mr. Jones, what did you marry me for? Don't forget how you pleaded with me, and what you promised."

Mr. Jones could only subside into silence, unable, as men always are, to argue with extravagance and selfishness. The crash came the evening after the noonday wedding, where the lady in pink and green cut her last splurge.

Mr. Jones had lost his place, was heels over head in debt, had been notified by his landlord to vacate his house immediately, the shopkeepers were after him and he was in despair. There was no loving heart to whom he could pour out his trials-not a tender hand to stroke his forehead and bid him be cheerful, promising to help him over the stoutly: "Gerildy musn't put on airs here, my boy! You know we are hon-est workin' folks; everybody on my place has to work. If they don't, neither shall they eat."

Gerildy is now gradually performing over the churn and the cookstove. The only pink roses she wears are in her cheeks, and the only triumph she wins is the beautiful sleep which honest toil awards her; the only reproach she ever heaps is on her own past life and its sad

Mr. Riggars, too, encountered adversity. His salary was cut down, but when he announced it in his home he met an earnest loyal little face, which said to him: "Now, come, old fellow! Don't give up, and go to looking blue about this house! We'll get on all right, and I've got a little savings bank upstairs that'll turn out more help for this trouble than you will believe till you see it opened."

"Isn't marriage a lottery?" Bob Riggers said to his friends; "some men draw prizes and some draw blanks. Thank God, I'm one of the lucky ones.'

EDISON'S LATEST INVENTIONS. A New Phonograph-The Wonders of the Kinetograph.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The Edison phonograph works at this place are expected to resume operations next week. The skilled employes will then begin turning out a new style of phonograph, differing in a number of particulars from the machine now on the market. Thomas A. Edison has devoted himself to the new invention at his laboratory for some time, shutting himself up night and day, like an old monk in a cloister, as he always does on such occasions. He has been successful, and the new arrangement will not only be sold at a cheaper price than the old machine sells for, but the cylinders have been so adjusted that just double the former number of words can be placed thereon. The old cylinders had a capacity of 100 lines, while the new ones will receive 200 lines. New batteries have been devised which, while much less expensive, are even more effective than the ones now in use. The new batteries, with the improved cylinders, give to the machine the power of increasing the volume of sound, and also of furnishing double the quantity of matter. Other changes of a technical character have been made in the instrument calculated to improve its effectiveness and to decrease its cost.

Another of Mr. Edison's inventions, calculated to furnish entertainments to the public, will be put on the market in a short time. This instrument is of the nickel-in-the-slot type of machine, has been called the kinetograph, and is intended to outvie the instantaneous pro-cess of photography, in that, by means of the peculiar mechanism with which it is provided, a series of photographs, about forty to the minute, can be taken. So rapidly does this machine work that every motion of a dancer's feet, every twist or turn of a club swinger's wrists and arms are reproduced. The impressions are taken on a long strip of gelatine film with such rapidity and accuracy that not the faintest motion of the performing athlete is missed. It is the intention of the inventor to have the gelatine strips manufactured at some central point, in the same manner as the phonograph cylinders. The machines will be sold or rented to parties under the same conditions as prevail with the phonographs. Then the gelatine strips will be inserted, and the weight of a nickel, as it drops through the slot, sets the machinery in motion and the photographs are flashed before the gaze of the beholder with such regularity that he seems to see the living subjects.

For the edification of a party of sightseers at the Orange labratory last week an improvised barber shop was fitted up, and the services of a nearby tonsorial artist were secured. An attendsaid in a low tone, "I don't think I and at the labratory took a seat in the ought to lose the chance." tion. The barber lathered his man, and then proceeded to shave him in While the barber regulation style. was at work several pretended custom-ers entered, and one showed the parber a humorous paragraph in a newspaper.

When the strip of gelatime was again passed through the kinetograph every detail of the shave, every motion of the barber's hands, each expression of the men's faces were reproduced so perfectly and so well-timed that the spectators could see the scenes repeated in the machine.

As yet the new instrument has no commercial value, but the parties in-terested believe that its possibilities as means of furnishing amusement are unlimited. It is claimed that by the use of this machine all the rounds of a boxing contest, every blow in a prize fight or other contest, can be reproduced, and the whole placed on exhibition at a nickel a head. By this means the hundreds of thousands who would wish to see the meeting between Corbett and Mitchell can witness the encounter, counterfeited by the kinetograph, on every street corner within a week after the gladiators meet.

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 .- Money on call easy at 1 per cent; last loan closed at 1 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 31/2a51/2 per cent. Sterling exchange easier at $4 83 1/204 87. Sales were 121,500 shares.

It was a very dull day in the stock exchange, the total sales being less than transactions of a single hour on an ordinary active market. The tone of the speculation was, however, much heavier than on yesterday, and the traders who sold for a decline then were to-day anxious to cover. Perhaps the most potent influence in the change of speculative mind was the more favorable prospect of the passage of the bill providing for coining the silver seigniorage now in the treasury, which the traders accepted as likely to increase the volume of speculative investment. Another factor in the improved conditions was the announcement in the Washington reports that the secretary of the treasury was determined upon the issue of bonds under the existing law calling for a high rate of interest, if Congress did not enact a new law giving power to issue low interest bonds. London houses were without many orders, but did sell Louisville & Nashville and St. Paul moderately. St. Paul led in the dealings, showing a gain of percent on the day. Sugar fluctuated within a limit of 19% advancing % per cent on the day on buying by insiders. Save for brief periods of weakness at the opening and about 1 o'clock, the general market was firm and closed with an upward tendency to prices, the improvement ranging from ½ 10 2% per cent.

"About ten years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poison. Leading physicians prescribed medicine after medicine, which I took without any relief. I also tried mercurial and potash remedies, with unsuccessful results, but which brought on an attack of mercurial rheumatism that made my life and approximation and potash remedies.

on an attack of mercurial rheumatism that made my life one of agony. After suffering four years I gave up all remedies and began using S.S.S. After taking several bottles I was entirely cured and able to resume work. Is the greatest medicine for blood poisoning to-day on the market."
